Browser Artifact Analysis for Evidence Validation using Foxton Forensics Tools

Background

Investigators at the New York State Police were brought in for an attempted murder investigation that occurred in the town of New Hartford, NY. Robert William's wife Arlene called 911 on 10/22/2016 to report that her husband had become rapidly ill while they were eating dinner and she was afraid that he was going to die. The local police believe that Arlene may have poisoned Robert's food or drink at some point during their meal. Local police were able to speak with Robert as he was recovering in the hospital and he expressed to them that he was fearful his wife was trying to kill him because they had been having marital problems. He stated that he had helped her cook dinner, but he had left his beer unattended for approximately ten minutes before dinner. He stated he wants her charged and put in prison. Police also spoke with Robert's wife Arlene and she stated they had indeed been having marital problems, but that Robert was the one who wanted out of the marriage. She stated he had been depressed for a while and that she was worried that his drinking combined with his Xanax medication was causing their problems. She insisted that she didn't poison Robert. The New Hartford officers on scene were able to capture the browser history from both Arlene and Robert's user accounts on the shared computer. However, due to a malfunction in the capture tool only the history from a single day 10/21/2016 was captured. Both accounts on the computer are password protected and neither spouse knows the other's password.

Request

You are to review the browsing history and cached files from the provided captured data using Foxton Forensics' Web History Viewer tool. Any searches recovered through your analysis that are related to the circumstances of the case should then be validated by manually reviewing the databases associated with the browsers using SQLite Studio. Please report on the following information:

- If any research was conducted related to poisoning and what was that research
- Identify any searches of interest and what search engine was used at that time
- Please identify any other Internet activity of interest including how the user reached those websites identified as being of interest (typed, redirect, etc.)
- If any suspicious websites are identified please attempt to review any associated cached web pages to determine the relevance of the content on the page to the investigation
- Does the data support the husband's theory

Summary of Findings

During the investigation, pertinent information was found such as internet browser history and search history which is displayed in the analysis section of this report.

Collection and Analysis

Collection

The obtained browser history from both Arlene and Robert were investigated and displayed some pertinent information which is shown in the analysis section below.

Analysis

Using Foxton Forensics Browser History Software, Arlene's browser history was examined first which displayed three different web browser artifacts from Chrome, Firefox and Microsoft. The Chrome browser was examined, and the cached web page folder displayed searches of interest such as fitness equipment, fitness clothing, iPad mini 4, CNN News and housing floor plans. The Chrome web browser was used for these searches and the URL's to these cached web pages are displayed in Figure 1.

The Microsoft Edge web browser was investigated and didn’t display any pertinent information. Mostly animated images were found, and the Microsoft Edge browser can be assumed as rarely used as displayed in Figure 7.

Overall, Arlene’s web browsing history did not display any pertinent information to Roberts theory nor anything towards researching poison. After Arlene’s web browsers artifact history was investigated, Roberts web browsing artifacts were investigated. Robert also had three different web browser artifacts from Google Chrome, Mozilla Firefox and Microsoft Edge. The Chrome Browsers cached web page folder was examined and displayed some of Roberts interest such as a water bottle, Ford F150 vehicle, Ford Explorer vehicle and motor trends. The Google Chrome web browser was used for these searches as displayed in Figure 8.

The Google Chrome artifacts didn't provide pertinent information to Roberts story so the FireFox web browser artifacts was examined. During the examination of the FireFox web browser artifacts it displayed evidence of poison searches and more. The cached web pages folder displayed Roberts searches of interest such as Pufferfish, arsenic toxicity, Xanax uses, arsenic poisoning, tetrodotoxin, depression medication, buying pufferfish, addiction hurting relationships, alcohol abuse, arsenic trioxide, and fugu. The URL's to these searches are displayed in Figure 11.

Viewing 23/23 records

The examination of both the web browsing artifacts from Arlene and Robert user accounts revealed that Robert's web browsing data does not support his theory stated. It seems that Robert may have either poisoned himself or Robert may have tried to poison his wife while cooking but either ate or drank the poisoned food/drink intended for his wife. It should be noted that Arlene did not contribute to the poisoning of Robert based on her browsing history.

Conclusion

The Foxton Forensics Browser History Viewer was used for this investigation. This software is a great tool to examine one's internet browsing history, typed searches downloads and more. Based on the findings in this report, Robert's theory is incorrect and further interrogation should be implemented.
